In order to effectively manage risks, the supply management professional must conduct risk planning which includes confirming the current state of the organization as well as conducting impact assessments.

If the supply management professional was determining the direct and indirect costs associated with identified risks which step of risk planning are they performing?

- A. Valuation phase of risk planning
- B. The scope phase of risk planning
- C. The probability estimation phase of risk planning
- D. The Identification phase of risk planning

Answer: A

Explanation:

In order to effectively manage risks, the supply management professional must conduct risk planning which includes confirming the current state of the organization as well as conducting impact assessments. If the supply management professional was determining the direct and indirect costs associated with identified risks they are performing the valuation phase of risk planning. The scope phase of risk planning involves exploring immediate problems and their effects on second and third tier events. The probability estimation phase of risk planning determines the occurrence for identified risks based on available information. The Identification phase of risk planning involves developing a comprehensive list of risks.
