NEW QUESTION: 1
A user has enabled versioning on an S3 bucket. The user is using server side encryption for data at Rest. If the user is supplying his own keys for encryption (SSE-C., which of the below mentioned statements is true?
A. The user should use the same encryption key for all versions of the same object

B. AWS S3 does not allow the user to upload his own keys for server side encryption
C. It is possible to have different encryption keys for different versions of the same object
D. The SSE-C does not work when versioning is enabled
Answer: C
Explanation:
AWS S3 supports client side or server side encryption to encrypt all data at rest. The server side encryption can either have the S3 supplied AES-256 encryption key or the user can send the key along with each API call to supply his own encryption key (SSE-C.. If the bucket is versioning-enabled, each object version uploaded by the user using the SSE-C feature can have its own encryption key. The user is responsible for tracking which encryption key was used for which object's version

NEW QUESTION: 2
Which statement is true about Fast Link Pulses in Ethernet?
A. They are used during collision detection.
B. They are part of UniDirectional Link Detection.
C. They are used during autonegotiation.
D. They are used only if the media type is optical.
Answer: C
Explanation:
To make sure that your connection is operating properly, IEEE 802.3 Ethernet employs normal link pulses (NLPs), which are used for verifying link integrity in a 10BaseT system. This signaling gives you the link indication when you attach to the hub and is performed between two directly connected link interfaces (hub-to-station or station-to-station). NLPs are helpful in determining that a link has been established between devices, but they are not a good indicator that your cabling is free of problems.
An extension of NLPs is fast link pulses. These do not perform link tests, but instead are employed in the auto negotiation process to advertise a device's capabilities.
