NEW QUESTION: 1

A customer needs to convert S-Series stacked switches to a VLT configuration to maintain port-channels from the customer's server. The customer's S-Series stack currently uses IEEE 802.1d. The customer wants to upgrade to a faster converging protocol. The servers that connect to the stack use static port-channels, but the customer wants to be IEEE 802.3ad compliant.

The customer has approved a maintenance window for the weekend to make these changes.

A network engineer has been given the following plan:

- Confirm the timings of the change window with the customer
- Upgrade the firmware of the S-Series switches

- Configure the single-domain VLT peers
 - Configure the port-channels down to the customer's servers
 - Utilize all existing cabling to proceed with the plan
- Which two pieces of information does the engineer need to proceed? (Choose two.)

- A. Version of VLT that is required to meet IEEE 802.1s compliance. Requirement for servers to actively negotiate an IEEE 802.3ad LAG.
- B. Time-out value for ARP-cache. Static mac-address assignment to ensure that all end servers are aware of the Root Bridge.
- C. Requirement of IEEE 802.1w for VLT Support. Requirement for servers to actively negotiate an IEEE 802.3ad LAG.
