NEW QUESTION: 3
The moving-average method of forecasting:
A. Includes each new observation in the average as it becomes available and discards the oldest observation.
B. Is a cross-sectional forecasting method.
C. Derives final forecasts by adjusting the initial forecast based on the smoothing constant.
D. Regresses the variable of interest on a related variable to develop a forecast.
Answer: A
Explanation:
The simple moving-average method is a smoothing technique that uses the experience of the past N periods through time period t) to forecast a value for the next period. Thus, the average includes each new observation and discards the oldest observation. The forecast formula for the next period for time period t+1) is the sum of the last N observations divided by N.
